ality of these good people. Friends were glad to meet again, many not having met since the last reunion. After greetings were exchanged the morning was spent in song service and general conversation.

About one o'clock the good ladies began to spread the long table which stands under the large oaks with every good thing to satisfy the inner man. After a short talk and prayer by W. F. Yongue all were commanded to help themselves to the bounty of good things spread before them, and all seemed very obedient to the command. In the afternoon lemonade was served.

The older people chatted together of present day topics and of bygone days for a short time. The younger set seemed to have a jolly time together. All too soon the time for parting came and after a song and prayer service friends parted wishing Mr. and Mrs. Hunter many returns of the day, and hoping to meet again on August 4, 1914.
